AT THE BOX OFFICE.

A Woman Arrives at an Understanding Regarding Two Theatre Tickets.

There was a long line of ticket buyers in front of the box office.

At the head of the line examining the plat, stood a richly bedecked woman with a poodle under her arm.

"Now, are you right sure," she asked, "there isn't a post in front of either of these two seats?"

"There isn't a post in that part of the house, madam," replied the man in the box office.

"I don't know about that"—and she drummed with her fingers on the frame plat—"I've been fooled that way so often. Many a time I've bought seats they've said were all right and found out after I got there that a great big post stood right in front of me. When you pay out your money for theatre tickets you want—what did you say these would be?"

"Dollar and a half each, ma'am. Will these two"—

"I thought you told me a minute ago they were dollar seats?"

"No. These were the dollar seats over here."

"I see. Well, I don't want any over there. You charge too much for"—

A loud cough, evidently forced, came from an impatient man about half-way down the line.

She looked placidly at him and resumed her conversation with the ticket seller.

"If anything happens that I can't use these can I return them and get my money back?"

"I don't like to sell them on any such understanding as that, ma'am."

Mutterings of discontent were heard along the line, which was growing momentarily longer.

"Oh, yes," said the ticket seller hastily. "If you can't use them bring them back."

"Suppose I couldn't bring them myself. I might be sick, or something."

"That's all right. Send them back. Shoot them back. Always glad to refund money on tickets," he said recklessly. "Will these two seats"—

"Those are not the ones I picked out, are they? It seems to me"—

"Oh, wrap the flag around me, boys!
To die were far more sweet!"

sang an exasperated man near the other end of the line.

"Those are the ones, madam," said the man in the box office, wearily. "Will they"—

"I thought they were further toward the left. Let me look"—

"Bow! wow!" barked an imitation dog near the street end of the line.

"Meaow! Meaow! Spitt!" answered an impatient cat with startling emphasis.

"Keep quiet, Fido. They shan't hurt you! Well, I suppose I'll have to—you said $2 for these two seats, didn't you?"

"Three dollars for these two. The dollar seats are back here."

A deep groan ran along the line.

"I think these men are very rude," she said, "Would seats in the fourth row in front of these come any higher?"

"No, ma'am, but those are all taken, as I explained a while ago. They're still taken. These are the nearest the stage of all we have left."

"Well, I believe I'll—are you sure there are no posts in front—Oh, I believe I did ask you about that. Three dollars? Here it is."

"This is a two-dollar bill, ma'am."

"Is it?" she gasped. "It was a five when I left home! Let me see it. So it is. I'll have to pick out a couple of dollar seats, unless"—

"That's all right, ma'am?" exclaimed the ticket seller with the eagerness of a drowning man grasping at a straw. "I'll save these seats for you till 7 o'clock this evening."

"Thanks; ever so much!"

With a beaming smile she clasped her poodle closer, slowly withdrew from her place at the head of the line and marched serenely away, ignoring the long-drawn sighs of relief that accompanied her departure, and business was resumed at the box office.

FIFTY YEARS OLD

Why let your neighbors know it?
And why give them a chance to guess you are even five or ten years more?
Better give them good reasons for guessing the other way. It is very easy; for nothing tells of age so quickly as gray hair.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

is a youth-renewer.
It hides the age under a luxuriant growth of hair the color of youth.
It never fails to restore color to gray hair. It will stop the hair from coming out also.
It feeds the hair bulbs. Thin hair becomes thick hair, and short hair becomes long hair.
It cleanses the scalp; removes all dandruff, and prevents its formation.
We have a book on the Hair which we will gladly send you.
If you do not obtain all the benefits you expected from the use of the Vigor, write the doctor about it. Probably there is some difficulty with your general system which may be easily removed. Address, Dr. J. C. Ayer, Lowell, Mass.

REUNITED.

I've been thinkin' of it over, an' it 'pears to me to-day
The war's the biggest blessin' that has ever come our way;
'Course, thar'll be some fightin', an' a few more graves 'll be
Whar the daisies in the medder look their purtiest at me—
For that's to be expected; but—the thing that makes me feel
That the war's a heavenly blessin' is the wounds that it'll heal!
The old wounds that's been rankin' sence the day of Gin'ral Lee
Said we'd rest an' think it over by that old-time apple tree!
I see the boys that fix us in the union coats of blue
On the same groun'—hale an' hearty, an' a-shakin' howdy-do!
An' I hear the ban' play "Dixie," an' I see 'em march away,
'Till I can't tell whar the blue is, an' I'm mixed up on the gray!
The old war tunes air ringin', an' "Dixie's" on the rise;
But "Yankee Doodle" follers 'for it's half way to the skies!
An' the old "Star-Spangled Banner" is in ever' steeple's chime,
An' I tell you, we're a-havin' of a hallelula time!
I'm glad I've lived to see it; I'm glad the time is come
When, north an' south, we answer to the roll-call of the drum!
When thar ain't no line divides us, but north an' south we stan'
For jest one common country—one freedom-lovin' lan'!
That's whar the war's a blessin', that's whar 'pears like I see
A brighter mornin' breakin' on the hill for you an' me!
It's shoulder now to shoulder—that ain't no blue or gray—
An' we're shoutin' "Hallelulia," an' we're happy on the way!

The Postmaster's Story.

BY P. M. BRASHER.

MY POSTOFFICE is not a large one, and is situated at a quiet crossroads in a remote part of the west. One lazy summer day, last year, I sat in the cool, near the door, smoking and gazing dreamily down the lane that leads away eastward. Not a sound broke the stillness, the very flies having apparently been put to sleep by the general torpidity of things, when suddenly I heard the noise of rapid hoof beats on Elk river bridge, a mile away, and ten seconds later the dull vista of the lane was enlivened by a speck of scarlet that rapidly approached me. In a minute more the panting animal came to a sudden stop at the postoffice porch, and Alma Cooper sprang off. Alma's face, usually happy and always pretty, was pale enough now to contrast disagreeably with the scarlet waist she wore. Before I could question her, however, she seized me by the arm and asked,

"Jim, has Harry written to me?"

"I don't know whether he has written, Alma, but there is no letter here for you."

Alma threw herself on a bench and burst into a flood of tears.

"Alma," I began pleadingly, "Alma, don't cry." We neighbors have a familiar way of addressing each other, and given names are most commonly used in ordinary conversation.

"Harry is all right," I went on, as my first appeal had no effect. "He is all right or he would have written. 'No news is good news,' you know."

"Haven't you heard?" She turned her tear-stained face upward and her dark eyes rested piercingly on mine. "Haven't you heard that Sutton's horses were stolen last night?"

"No. But what has that to do with getting Harry into trouble?"

"Why, he was home last evening, and now he is gone and so are the horses." Alma fell forward on the bench and cried afresh.

My heart sank within me. In communities like ours horse stealing is the crime of crimes.

"Nonsense, Alma," I said encouragingly, even presuming to lay my hand on the girl's shoulder. "Harry is no horse thief."

"No," she cried, and sprang to her feet, "he is not, but Sutton and the Barneses have taken the trail after him."

"Do you know where he is?"

"Not just now. He started to cross the range a-foot and promised to write from Waterville, but you say the letter hasn't come."

"No," I replied, "it hasn't. Harry wouldn't have had time to mail a letter in Waterville before the coach left that place this morning. Your letter will come to-morrow."

"That may be too late."

"But you can do nothing now, Alma. Don't worry about Harry. He'll come out all right, for he never stole those horses."

The girl cried again for a few seconds, then dried her eyes and said, "Jim, I'm glad you've got confidence in Harry. He never did anything wrong. I'm going now and I'll see to it that those fellows don't hurt him."

She said no more, but vaulted lightly from the porch to the saddle and rode down the lane, while I stood watching in admiration, for Alma was among the best riders in a region where nearly all women rode well. Her horse's hoofs rang out upon the bridge again, and then all was still as before.

On setting out toward the range, Harry, unconscious of danger, walked briskly along until well up in the timber-covered foothills and then, beginning to feel hungry, looked about for a place to lunch. At that moment the sight of a rabbit, darting from under a bush to safer refuge behind some rocks, suggested that a morsel of broiled meat would make a toothsome addition to the bread and butter in his pocket, and the young man, cocked revolver in hand, advanced to shoot. The rabbit fled again, and Harry sprang forward to get a better position, but unfortunately tripped over a root and fell heavily, the revolver exploding as he struck the ground. This mishap resulted in a lost rabbit and a slightly wounded forearm for Harry. He happened to see a small cabin near by, and at once took possession of it; for, though old, it offered a fair shelter. He now bandaged his arm as well as possible under the circumstances.

A "snack" of lunch came next in order, and the bread and butter had just been put out of sight when four or five men rode up and surrounded the cabin. One of the newcomers then demanded in loud tones that Harry come out and surrender. The solitary youth inside, hearing the summons, stepped to the door and said, laughingly,

"All right, Barnes, don't shoot. I give up."

"Well, well, Harry," replied the man addressed as Barnes, "you're in a bad fix."

"O, it was an accident," protested Harry, supposing the other referred to his wounded arm. "I don't believe the wound is serious."

"Might be better for you, kid, if the bullet had gone through your head."

"I don't know why," returned Harry. "What do you mean?"

"I mean that we've come to take you fur stealin' Sutton's horses."

"Stealin' Sutton's horses!" repeated Harry, in amazement. "I don't know anything about his horses."

"Here they are!" shouted a man from a grove of aspens nearby, as he emerged leading a pair of handsome bay horses.

"Good God! Barnes," stammered Harry, "I didn't know they were there. I only stopped here because I shot myself in the arm. I'm going across the range huntin' up a job and I didn't steal the horses."

"Looks bad for you, Harry," was all that Barnes said.

"Barnes, I'll tell you how it was," cried Harry, a new light now flashing upon him; "just down below here I tried to get a shot at a rabbit, but I fell over a root and shot myself. Then I came to this cabin to tie up the wound, for it bled quite a bit, and a man came out and ran off as I came up. He's the one that took the horses, and I know it. Look! here's a quirt he left behind in his hurry. You know that ain't my quirt—I never had one like it in my life."

Barnes looked at the quirt with an incredulous smile.

"No use, Harry," he said. "Your yarn is pretty thin and we're going to take you back to Sutton's. Hank Todd, down below here, told us that somebody rode Sutton's horses past his place last night and he took a shot at him because the fellow wouldn't stop. Your rabbit story looks a little like you invented it."

Afternoon was wearing away when one of my neighbors came into the postoffice to ask for mail and incidentally remarked that Harry Dell had been caught and taken to the Sutton ranch. I knew what that meant. No suspected horse thief could hope for mercy, or even justice, at the hands of the gang accustomed to hang around there, and after hastily locking up my store I jumped on a horse and rode to Sutton's.

As I expected, Harry was being "tried" before a brutal crowd of cowboys, most of whom would have been only too well pleased to help lynch a horse thief. Harry was in the midst of his defense as I entered, but his story made little impression on either court or listeners. Sutton himself had usurped the functions of judge, while his foreman and some of his hired men posed as the jury. The prisoner was not a little flustered by the gravity of his position, and this, together with the strong circumstantial evidence against him, made his case a weak one.

"Young feller," said Sutton, when Harry paused, "yer story's too thin. Yer stole them horses an' yer know yer did. I now give the case to the jury."

The jury declined to retire for consultation, but pronounced a verdict of guilty without leaving their seats.

"Take him out to stretch a rope," curtly remarked the judge. "There's been too much of this kind of thing goin' on 'round here an' we're goin' to stop it."

My blood boiled now, and walking over to Harry I faced Sutton and said, "Mr. Sutton, do you mean to hang this man?"

"That's what," returned Sutton.

"You shall not," I said determinedly.

"What the h— are you goin' to do about it?" demanded Sutton angrily.

"I'm going to see him get justice."

"He'll get justice all right. You'd better go back to your postoffice an' mind your own business."

Despite my protests, for every other man in the crowd was against me, Harry was taken to a lone tree standing about 200 yards distant. The sun had descended almost to the western horizon but its glare was strong and lit up every rock and bush on Saddle mountain, just behind us.

The rope was made ready.

"String him up," said Sutton.

The rope was already around the poor fellow's neck when I interrupted the proceedings by seizing it and saying:

"Tighten that rope and I'll cut it! You can shoot me if you want to, but so help me God! I'll stab any man that comes near me, and I'll stand by this boy while there's a breath left in my body."

A pause followed. It was broken by an order from the foreman to run me off, and as two men approached to obey I raised my arm to strike and threw back my head to await what would probably have been my death struggle, had I not caught sight of a bright scarlet object curiously bobbing about far up on the steep side of Saddle mountain.

"Back, men, back!" I screamed, pointing up to the timber. "Here comes Alma Cooper. She started out this morning to save Harry from trouble, and now she comes to save his life. Wait—you shall wait till she gets here."

Alma was now waving a handkerchief, and in a few seconds she dashed through the crowd to Harry's side Then she fell speechless from her saddle into his arms which, it is needless to say, were outstretched to receive her.

The cowboys closed in to hear the tidings, and after a tremendous effort to get herself under control, Alma began:

"You men, if I can call you men, who are so terribly anxious to hang somebody, had better wait till you get the right one. You're a fine, brave lot to tackle a single man and set out to hang him just because you wanted to, now, aren't you?"

Alma continued, a little calmer, but with no abatement of dramatic force: "O, yes, you must hang somebody and you couldn't wait to make sure who it ought to be. If you'd hanged him," pointing to Harry, "I'd have killed the last one of you," and in her superb wrath she looked capable of carrying out this threat. "He never stole your miserable horses, Sutton. It was another man and they've got him up in the valley. Here comes Hank Todd. He'll tell you I speak the truth."

Congratulations, apologies and propositions to celebrate with a dance were now in order, and before this had subsided another horseman rode up. It was Mr. Cooper, Alma's father, who, on the strength of a rumor that his daughter was riding madly over the country in search of a young man, had spent most of the day in chasing after the spirited girl, and was now in anything but a good humor. He sternly ordered Alma to go home and not disgrace herself any more.

"Now, don't you lock horns with me," answered Sutton, laughing. "I come near makin' a mess of this business, an' I want to kinder even things up. Why, a blind steer could see that these kids is mighty struck on each other, an' why not let 'em hitch right now? Hi, boys! let's open the dance to-night with a weddin'—what d' yer say?"

A wild cheer of approval followed. Alma blushed, and her indignant sire raged; but he was advised to suppress his wrath and bring his wife to the wedding, "Because, you see," said Sutton, "I'm bound to give the young feller an easier noose than the one he come so near gettin' this afternoon. More'n that, I'll give him a check for $500 to start housekeepin' on."

Dewey, the Schoolboy.

HATTIE W. BAKER.

Just across the street from where I write stands the old Johnson academy, where Dewey was a schoolboy in his teens, in the early fifties. A gray haired man, who was one of Dewey's chums, tells us this anecdote of him:

"Three or four of us, including George, used to go to school in company and we would meet daily a crowd of smaller boys on their way to the district school. They got into the habit of making it interesting for us, whenever we met, by pelting us with snowballs and insulting remarks. Some of us were disposed to retaliate, but George would say: 'Oh, come along boys. Never mind those little shavers.'

"But the 'little shavers,' unable to appreciate such forbearance, seemed to imbibe the idea that we did not dare to attack them on account of their superior numbers, so grew daily more annoying One day an immense snowball hit George square on the side of the head, filling his ear with snow.

"Handing me his books, in a twinkling he had caught the ring-leader of our tormentors, and administered such a spanking as the chap would not forget in a hurry. If he is alive to-day he is probably proud of having been spanked by Dewey, though at the time he howled like mad. The crowd were so dazed at this sudden attack that they stood as if paralyzed, and George pushed several over into the snow, and scrubbed some faces cleaner than they were wont to be, I dare say, before the rest of the enemy gathered their wits enough to take to their heels."

"'Father once told me,' said George, as he brushed off the snow and took his books again, 'never to fight unless I was obliged to. But if you have to fight, fight in earnest!' he said.

"We had no further trouble with the district school boys that winter. The lesson Dewey gave them was as effectual, in its way, as the lessons he has given some boys of a larger growth, at Manila."

NO MOVING THE QUAKER.

Some short while back a Quaker, driving a single-horse chaise up a lane that leads from one part of Cottonpolis to another, chanced to meet with a young man who was also in a similar carriage, says London Tit-Bits. There was not room enough for them to pass each other unless one of them would back his carriage.

"I shan't make way for you," said the younger man.

"I am older than thou art," replied the Quaker, "and therefore have a right to expect thee to give way so I can pass."

"Well, I won't," resumed the young fellow. He then pulled out a newspaper and began to read as he sat still in his carriage.

The Quaker observing him pulled a pipe and some tobacco from his pocket, struck a light, and sat and puffed away very comfortably.

"Friend," said he, "when thou hast read paper I should be very glad if thou wouldst lend it to me."

The young man gave up the contest.

Is the Steam Locomotive Doomed?

Men who know say that in ten years steam locomotives will disappear and electric motors will supplant them. They also say that with the motive power trains will rush along at a minimum speed of 100 miles an hour. This will prove a blessing to those who wish to go quickly from one point to another, but no more so than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has proved a blessing to those who wish to go from sickness to health. The Bitters act at once upon stubborn cases of dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness and liver complaint. They improve the appetite, quiet the nerves, and induce sound, refreshing sleep. The trial of a bottle will afford convincing proof. Sold at all drug stores.

They Served Their Time.

How Two Brothers Tried to Escape Army Service.

The major lit his cigar and for several minutes puffed rings of smoke toward the bison's head that ornamented the wall over the fireplace Then he began:

"The work of provost marshal during the sixties had its hardships and dangers, as well as service, in the field. In 1861 I was in charge of a district in the northern part of Pennsylvania, where a majority of the inhabitants were well disposed, even if somewhat indifferent, as to the outcome of the great struggle between the North and South. There were a few, however, who were troublesome. I remember two brothers named Muller, who gave me a particularly exciting time upon one occasion. Both had been drafted and both refused to come down from their place on the mountain and be mustered in.

"I took four of my men one day and went after them. The roads were wretched and it took a morning's hard work to get back to their cabin, but at last our tired horses brought us out into their clearing. Across the open ground, about midway from east to west, ran a shallow stream, and on the other side, near the door of their rude dwelling, we saw the Muller boys at work chopping wood.

"They caught sight of us as we advanced from the shelter of the woods, and dropping their axes quickly disappeared within the cabin. We trotted forward and were just entering the little stream to cross, when they re-appeared with guns in their hands.

"Sam, the taller of the two brothers, waved his weapon and shouted: 'Pull up!'

"Seeing that they were in an ugly mood, I ordered a halt for a parley.

"'Don't you cross that crick,' shouted Sam; 'that's the dead line. You leave us alone and we'll leave you alone.'

"Well the long-range argument that ensued was fruitless of results. They were an obstinate pair and absolutely declined to come to the defense of their country. Sheltered by the thick log walls of their cabin, they were not as much afraid of us as we in our exposed position were afraid of them. I knew their reputation for recklessness and didn't doubt for a moment but what they would carry out their threat to fire on us if we crossed the creek.

"It looked as though we would have to give it up as a bad job and return empty-handed, when my eye lighted on a heavy timber cart that stood off to the right near the edge of the woods and on our side of the stream. Beyond it was a pile of railroad ties which the brothers had been getting out. Within two minutes we were piling up those ties on the cart, so as to make a kind of rampart. With a long log chain and some heavy rope which we found lying near by we then rigged into it four of our horses.

"The Muller boys at first didn't see just what we were up to, but as soon as they did a volley of picturesque curses was directed at us. Then followed a couple of bullets which went by uncomfortably close to our heads.

"But now everything was ready, and perched behind our movable breastwork we started the horses at a trot down to the stream. We splashed through it and lumbered up the other side, popping away all the time with our carbines to keep the enemy within doors.

"Two shots rang out from the cabin and two of the horses fell. The others stumbled and went down on top of their dead companions.

"Fortunately we were well over the rise, and the fifty feet that separated us from our goal was as level as a floor. To jump out, cut the cart loose and regain cover was the work of an instant. Turning the front wheel so as to clear the prostrate animals, we began to push our fortress slowly before us. Crack, crack went the Mullers' guns, and several bullets buried themselves in the ties When we had advanced to within a dozen feet of the cabin, we made a rush for the door. To my astonishment the place was empty. There was no other door than the one we had come in by, and the windows were too small to permit the passage of a man. For an instant we stood amazed; then a scraping noise overhead attracted our attention and the protruding end of a ladder which was being drawn up through a hole in the loft told the story.

"I was congratulating myself that we had our prisoners, when we heard them getting on to the roof. Hurrying from the cabin to prevent their escaping to the ground, we were greeted by a fusillade of shots which drove us quickly indoors again.

"The situation now presented a changed and somewhat humorous aspect. The Mullers were still prisoners, to be sure, for the windows and door enabled us to command all sides of the cabin with our carbines; but we were no less captives than they.

"A council of war was held. They couldn't get away; we couldn't get away, nor could we get at them except at a great disadvantage. Night would bring no change, for it was full moon, and outside of the immediate shadow of the cabin it would be almost as light as day. Our hasty conference resulted in the decision to wait for hunger to bring them into submission.

"It was now long past noon and finding some cold potatoes and dry bread we made out a meagre meal as we stood on guard. The afternoon passed; evening came, and almost before the glow in the west was gone the moon rose.

There was still a plentiful supply of bread and potatoes, so we did not lack for supper. An invitation to our friends above to come down and join us was replied to in language which I will not repeat. After a time we heard them moving uneasily about, but a warning to be careful not to fall off quieted them down.

"It was a long and weary night's vigil, for only one of us could be off duty at a time. At last morning came. Hoping that eighteen hours fasting and reflection had brought them into a more reasonable frame of mind. I went to the door just as the sun was peeping over the eastern horizon and asked the enemy down to breakfast. After a moment a voice answered:

"'Say captain?'

"'Well?'

"'We've had enough of this.'

"'Very well,' I returned, 'you know what to do.'

"'We'll give up.'

"'All right,' said I, 'but no tricks. Throw down your guns outside and come down yourselves inside.'

"Down the guns came with a crash, and then through the hole from the loft dropped the end of the ladder.

"And that is how we got the Muller boys."—Phila. Times.

General News.

Up in the Catskill mountains, where the caterpillars have been very destructive to maple and apple trees, a novel and effective way to fight the pests has been discovered. A woman blowing a dinner horn under a maple tree was surprised to see the caterpillars fall to the ground by the hundreds and continue to do so at each succeeding blast. She told her story and the noise cure was immediately adopted by the neighbors; horns, drums and conch shell were brought into play, and the noise was tremendous. Caterpillars by the bushel dropped to the earth, and were gathered up and destroyed. Conch shells seem most effective, though a well beaten bass drum does good work. Although rather late, the caterpillars having almost eaten the foliage from the trees, it is believed that many orchards threatened with destruction may yet be saved.

SOLDIERS WANTED.

The following view of the situation in the Philippines, as expressed by the Phila. Record, corresponds with that held by not a few citizens of the United States. Public disapproval of President McKinley's course seems to be growing, especially since it appears that the President is a decided expansionist:

With characteristic caution, the Administration at Washington is preparing the public mind for a call for volunteers to subdue the fighting Filipinos. The well known touts and advance agents of publicity have been called upon to set out in type the reluctance of the Government to demand unnecessary sacrifices from the people, and its stern determination to parley no more with the desperate insurgents around Manila. At the same time the censored dispatches from the seat of war have been made to convey the implication that only a few thousand men and a few weeks of good campaigning weather will be required to put an end to the Filipino resistance to American domination. Under such conditions the hardship and losses of campaigning against the insurgents could scarcely be weighed in the balance against the presumed necessity of asserting powerfully the expanded authority of Federal power.

There is no doubt whatever that any desired number of fighting men might be secured by the Government for military adventure in the Philippines if only the conditions of warfare should be fully set forth in advance. But American troops must know exactly what they are fighting for, and how long they are expected to fight. The volunteers who went to the Philippines a year ago to fight Spain have been kept there, in conflict with semi-barbaric natives, long after hostilities with Spain had ended and their terms of service had legally expired. It could scarcely be anticipated that men thus hardly treated would reenlist, and General Otis' dispatch stating that the volunteers wish to be mustered out at San Francisco only furnishes official confirmation of a condition of affairs long suspected by shrewd observers of the Philippine campaign. The volunteers will not take the travel pay bounty of about $450 each and reenter the Federal service; they prefer to come home at Government expense to be relieved permanently from military duty.

Of course, the soldiers who shall leave Manila for the United States must be replaced by fresh troops. If the 15,000 volunteers should be released from service, at least an equal number of additional troops would have to be raised throughout the country in order to maintain General Otis' forces at the fighting strength said to be necessary—about 35,000 men. But if the abortive operations of the past four months have demonstrated anything it is that a force of this strength can only maintain itself in and around Manila under shelter of the guns of Federal war ships. It cannot capture the enemy's battalions, weapons or leaders; nor can it hold ground taken in fierce engagements. Obviously, there can be no end to a warfare waged under such conditions.

What the Administration has to do, then, is either to continue the pretense of active hostilities for another year, or to put into the field the full force of men allowed by Congress in the Army Reorganization act. It would take every man of the increased force to make any impression on the skillful and seasoned guerrilla fighters who are disputing with us the control of Luzon Island. But if any serious attempt is to be made this year to reduce the Filipinos to subjection the Government will have to set about the work at once, regardless of its effect upon the political fortunes of party leaders. To play politics with the lives of American soldiers would be a far riskier experiment than even the calling to arms of every volunteer authorized under existing law.

THE FALL ELECTIONS.

The November election this year will occur on the 7th of the month. There will be elections in 11 States and Governors will be chosen in six, namely, Maryland, Ohio, Iowa, Massachusetts, Kentucky and Mississippi. In two of these six there will be no semblance of a contest. Massachusetts will elect a Republican Governor as usual, and Mississippi will be still more decisively Democratic. In Iowa the size of the Republican majority is always an interesting indication of the drift of public sentiment in the Middle West. Twice in recent years the State has given a Democratic majority. The other three of the six States to elect Governors are in doubt. These are Maryland, Ohio and Kentucky, with the chances favoring the Republicans in Ohio and the Democrats in Kentucky. All of the six States mentioned have Republican Governors except Mississippi. Iowa elects the Governor biennially, the present Executive having received a majority of 30,000 in 1897. Last year the State went Republican by 63,000 and McKinley carried it by 65,000. McKinley carried Kentucky by 200 majority, with 5,000 votes cast by Gold Democrats. Last year the Democrats had a plurality of 18 000 The present Governor, Bradley, is the first Republican Governor ever elected in Kentucky. It is considered to be almost assured that the Democrats will carry the election.

In Ohio the situation is interesting from the fact that there is bitter discord in the ranks of the Republican party, which is absolutely dominated by Senator Hanna. The Republican nominations have been made and there is a lively contest for the Democratic nomination for Governor. The Governor in Ohio is elected every two years and in 30 years since the war the Democrats have elected four, namely, William Allen in 1873, R. M. Bishop in 1877, George Hoadley in 1883 and James E. Campbell in 1889. In 1896 the Bryan ticket polled about 40 per cent. of the vote of the State and in the State outside the big cities over 50 per cent.—Balto. Sun.

THE fact that the friends of National Committeeman Guffey and those of his predecessor in the leading councils of the Democrats, William F. Harrity, worked harmoniously together in the recent State Convention prevents surprise from being caused by the announcement that those party elements are to remain united for co-operation in the election of delegates to the National Convention of next year. Although Mr. Harrity remains out of active politics, his friends know that he intends participating in the nomination of a President and Vice-President and the making of a national platform.

GOVERNOR STONE, who arrived in Chambersburg Thursday afternoon to go trout fishing in Fulton county, declared there that he would not make any appointment to the Supreme Court Bench just now, as he had offered the place to several Democrats, and they all refused. This means that he will not appoint Judge Mestrezat, the Democratic nominee. The Governor added that he would await the action of the Republican State Convention.

GENERAL FRANK REEDER acted as dictator at the Northampton County Republican Convention, last Saturday. He was chairman of the meeting and made a speech denouncing the anti-Quayites as traitors. They should be driven from the party, he said, and none but Republicans placed on duty. In the resolutions adopted ex-Senator Quay was lauded, and the "antis" were condemned as cowards.

REV. O. R. MILLER had an interview with President McKinley at Holyoke, Mass., on the army canteen matter. He says the President told him that "the position which some of the temperance people take on the question is simply absurd." He then went on to say that the Attorney General must interpret the law as he finds it, but added, in closing: "Personally, I should be very glad to see prohibition of the canteen."

NINE regiments of volunteers is the minimum number named at the War Department as likely to be called for by the President for the purpose of strengthening Major General Otis' army in the Philippines. If the company strength is fixed at 128 men each, as was done by a recent order of Major General Miles in the case of the other regiments serving in the Philippines, the nine regiments would contain about 13,500 men.

Aguinaldo Masses an Army.

Has 8,000 Troops Ready to Hurl Against General MacArthur—Men Sleeping on Their Arms.

A Manila dispatch of the 23rd says:

Aguinaldo has taken command of the army of General Luna, whom he recently had assassinated, and has massed the largest insurgent force yet mobilized, about 8,000 men, bringing 2,000 from the Antipolo region. He is exceedingly troublesome. Last night his men wounded two pickets of the Seventeenth Regiment. Major General MacArthur's men are constantly on the alert to repel any attacks by the insurgents, sleeping upon their arms.

The General sincerely hopes that the Filipinos will give him another chance for a battle, for the soldiers really enjoy an opportunity to fight them when they can do so without wading through swamps to catch them. General MacArthur is of the opinion that Aguinaldo is preparing to make a desperate attempt to retake San Fernando.

The transport Centennial, while rounding Point England on the northern coast of Luzon, on her way to this port, struck a rock on Wednesday and remained fast for several hours, during which time she was surrounded by swarms of natives in canoes, who became menacing. Captain Eagle was compelled to throw overboard a hundred tons of supplies in order to lighten the ship. The Filipinos towed the cases ashore and were fighting over the spoils while the Centennial got away.

Saved a Boy's Life.

The Phila. Evening Bulletin of Tuesday, June 20th, has the following on the heroism of E. A. Kretschman, of Philadelphia, a son-in-law of Mrs. Jacob Remmel, of this place.

E. A. Kretschman, of 158 N. 13th st., on Sunday risked his life to save a small boy from drowning.

Mr. Kretschman was on the wharf at the foot of Callowhill st., when four or five frightened children ran toward him screaming that a boy was drowning. Mr. Kretschman ran as quickly as he could in the direction in which they pointed, and reached the end of the wharf just in time to see the despairing face of a little boy disappear beneath the water for the last time. The boy looked like a shadow he had sunk so far, when Mr. Kretchman, without stopping to remove any of his clothing dived in.

"I tried to grab him by the hair," said Mr. Kretschman, "but his head was shaved as smooth as a billiard ball. He had no clothes on, and he was slippery as an eel. I couldn't get a hold of him anywhere.

"I got underneath him and pushed him up. He tried to get hold of me, but I managed to keep him off.

"I used to be a pretty good swimmer, but I can tell you I was just about ready to give up when I reached the edge of the wharf. My clothes weighed a ton, and I thought they would drag me under in spite of myself. It's almost impossible to swim in one's clothes."

Mr. Kretchman says that after mature deliberation, he concludes that the attractions of heroism are greatly over-estimated.

Sabbath Desecration.

"ATLANTIC CITY, June 18, 1899.—United States Senator Quay upheld his reputation as a redoubtable fisherman, for when his private yacht, Mark Soov, gaily returned to her pier this evening she was well-laden with deep-sea trophies, won by the famous angler.

"Mr. Quay came down to the shore early this morning with a party of Keystone State politicians, which included his colleague, Senator Boies Penrose, State Insurance Commissioner Durham and Colonel Ralston.

"The party lost no time boarding Mr. Quay's yacht and the craft was steered out about five miles from the city, and there lingered while the Senator and his friends angled the live-long day."

The above appeared in the Philadelphia Press on Monday. When United States Senators have so little regard for the Lord's Day as to use it for the above purpose it sets an injurious example to the people at large. The people of the great state of Pennsylvania have a right to expect more of the men whom they honour with the highest office within their gift, and such flagrant Sabbath desecration on the part of the men in the positions of Quay and Penrose should be rebuked by all Christian people.

What Trusts Are Doing.

P. E. Dowe, President of the Commercial Travelers' League, who is gathering information for the use of traveling salesmen in the fight they are making against trusts, showed a letter, which declared that the American Tobacco Company had dismissed 90 per cent, of the traveling agents of factories bought by the trust. In New York City, another letter said, 400 jobbers, salesmen and factory salesmen had been thrown out of employment by the Tobacco Trust.

"The Leather Trust," said Mr. Dowe, "which has advanced the price of goods 15 per cent. had discharged a large number of its travelers, and intends to reduce the number still further.

"Many salesmen have been called in by the Biscuit Trust 'to await instructions.' The men who are still on the road have been ordered to double their lines, which means that the men called in will be discharged."

Army Rule in Cuba.

Jealousies and Arrogance Seriously Hurting Our Interests.

The N. Y. Herald prints an elaborate review of the condition of affairs in Cuba at the present time, written by one of its men who has returned from a study of the island, saying in part:

"Elevated like a mountain peak above all other things connected with the present and future condition of Cuba is the one great, impressive fact that military government is a weight on the development of the island and a barrier to the good will and co-operation of the Cubans.

"Sewers are being built under direction of army engineers. Sanitary inspections are carried on by army surgeons. Wherever the Cuban goes he is confronted with a show of military authority. The cry among educated Cuban is 'Give us less militarism. Give us more civil government.'"

A Cuban who is a friend of the United States and one of General Lee's supporters before the war, is quoted as saying:

"Will you tell me on what theory the United States have put six military governors and a strong force of troops in Cuba and have kept them there? The people of Cuba have been held under the iron heel of militarism for centuries. They always had military rule. They revolted against that system. With the aid of the United States they were freed from Spain. With what result? Military rule by the United States follows."

"By way of illustrating what has been accomplished in Cuba no better subject can be taken than the Post Office Department of the island. It shows what can be done without military aid, co-operation or interference. The Department of Posts is entirely independent of the army under the direction of Major Rathbone. Incidentally he is the man who did the work that broke up the Louisiana lottery. When he went to Cuba he found the Spaniards had left not a scrap of the old Post Office Department. He got together a few Cuban clerks, got some help from the States and opened the Department. In a few days the director and all his staff were turned into the streets by the United States army sanitary inspectors. They got another building.

"The Director of Posts needed letter boxes and ordered boxes similar to those in use in the United States. The lettering on them was 'U. S. M.'

"'Ah, ha!' exclaimed Sanguily, 'the Americans have been fooling us. They mean to grab the mails and stay.'

"The lettering was changed next day.

"The Director of Posts ordered a new American outfit of letter boxes, etc.

"'See!' exclaimed the Sanguilys, 'the words "general delivery" and "stamps" are in American. Spanish lettering, needless to say, was added next day.

"Everything possible has been done to please the Cubans and make them think the Americans their friends. The Cuban steamship lines are carrying the mails for nothing until July, 1900, and General Rathbone has also discoved by chance a law of 1839 requiring the railroads to carry the mails for nothing.

"In a ride of sixty miles in Puerto Principe, in a rich country, not one living animal, horse, pig or cow was seen. The country had been swept bare by war. One can ride for hours through Havana, Matanzas or Pinar del Rio and see nothing but ruined plantations. No steps have been taken to rebuild, nor are any likely to be taken for years.

"As things stand to-day, two causes contribute to the delay in any movement to revive the sugar industry. If annexation took place, countless millions would be poured in. The other reason is the uncertainty as to the relations between debtor and creditor.

"The labor problem is a more difficult one. Suggestions have been made to take a large number of negro laborers from the Southern States. Other plans are to transplant them from other West India islands. One thing is certain—the brawn and muscle are not in Cuba now.

With the tobacco growing industry the situation is different. Most of the tobacco growers paid tribute to both sides during the war, and their property was saved."

Sheep Killed by Dogs.

In connection with the recent payment by the County Commissioners of several claims for damages for sheep killed by dogs—among them $15 to Harry M. Trostle, of Highland township, and $10 to Hiram Baker, of Franklin—the publication of the law on the subject may be of interest. It reads, in part:

Section 3. That whenever any person shall sustain any loss or damage to sheep by a dog, or dogs, in any township, borough or city, such person, his or her agent or attorney may complain to any justice of the peace, magistrate or alderman of such township, borough or city, in writing to be signed by the person making such complaint, stating therein when, where and how, such damage was done and by whose dog or dogs, if known, whereupon the justice of the peace, magistrate or alderman, to whom such complaint shall be made, shall notify the township, borough or city auditors, or controllers, of such claim, and such township, borough or city auditors shall at once examine the place where the alleged loss or damage was sustained and the sheep injured or killed, if practicable, and they shall examine under oath or affirmation to be administered by one of them, any witness called before them by subpœna which the said authorities are hereby authorized to issue, and after making diligent inquiry in relation to such claim, shall determine and report to such justice, magistrate or alderman in writing, whether any such damage has been sustained and the amount thereof, and who was the owner or keeper of such dog or dogs, if known, by which such damage was done, and if the dog or dogs are destroyed that caused the damage, if known, then the owner or keeper of said dog or dogs shall be exempt from further claim. Such report so made shall be signed by a majority of the auditors and delivered to the justice, magistrate or alderman, before whom such claim has been made: Provided, That any owner of dog or dogs refusing to kill his dog or dogs, after having received due notice from the constable or police through the justice of the peace, magistrate or alderman before whom such claim has been made of the damage done by his dog or dogs, shall be liable for all damage and cost of the same.

Section 4. That upon receiving such report the said justice, magistrate or alderman, shall immediately make a certificate thereto, signed and sealed by him, that such appraisement was regularly and duly made by such auditors or controllers, and if by such report it appears that any damage has been sustained by such complainant, the said justice, magistrate or alderman, shall deliver such report and all papers relating to the case to such claimant, his or her agent or attorney, upon payment of the costs up to that time hereinafter provided to be delivered to the county commissioners or councilmen or cities where such damage has been sustained to be filed in their office.

Section 5. That upon the commissioners of the county and councilmen of cities receiving such report, if it shall appear thereby that a certain amount of damage has been sustained by the claimant to sheep by a dog or dogs, they shall immediately draw their order on the treasurer of such county or city in favor of the claimant for the amount of loss or damage such claimant has sustained according to such report, with necessary and proper costs incurred as aforesaid, to be paid out of the fund raised or to be raised by taxes or dogs as hereinbefore provided.

In the Evans Cemetery, near Riddleburg, Bedford county, lies the body of Thomas White, a Revolutionary soldier, who is known to have helped throw the tea into Boston harbor. He was with Washington during the most of the war. The descendants, with others, have placed a monument over his grave, which will be unveiled July 4. Former Assistant Secretary of Interior John M. Reynolds will deliver an oration. There will also be a parade.

Making Hay.

A Paper Suggesting Several Points in Haymaking Which May Interest the Farmer.

A gentleman who has had large experience in handling hay, hands us the following communication. The point which he seeks to establish is, we believe, a good one—Do not cut down more grass than can be made into hay the same day, under ordinary conditions. The communication reads:

Owing to the short crop of grass all over the country it will be wise for our farmers to make all the hay for market possible and just at this time it may not be out of place to say a few words in reference to making hay. First, two-thirds of the hay that is made is spoiled and not fit for market. The writer in 1895 baled and shipped from Gettysburg 218 cars of hay or 2000 tons, not over 100 tons of which graded No. 1; balance No. 2 and 3 and common. The difference in price of No. 1 and No. 3 hay is $3 per ton., so the loss to the farmer or packer in the transaction was over $5,000. Now, when providence gives the farmer the grass and the weather to make the hay it does seem wrong that ⅔ of all the hay should be spoiled in making, yet the writer in riding over the county sees the same thing going on this year. It seems that the main object many farmers have in view in making hay is time—who will get done making hay first—and you will find them out mowing at 6 o'clock in the morning when the blades of grass are loaded full of water, and cutting down 5, 10, 15 or 20 acres before they think of making it, and before the last five are cut the first is spoiled, and by the time the first is taken in the last of the field is spoiled and none fit for market. Even if it does not rain, one dew or too much sun will make it unfit and color the hay so that it grades on the market No. 3 or common, and the farmer must sell from $3 to $4 less than the man that makes it right, or the packer looses it. The expense which is nearly $4 per ton is the same on No. 3 or common hay as it is on No. 1 in shipping to the city. It is a false impression that you are saving time by cutting early in the morning, and a whole field down at one time is erroneous. The old adage handed down by our grandfathers, "mow when it rains and make hay while the sun shines," should be forgotten. The farmers will gain time and make hay that will grade No. 1 and bring the highest price if they will follow strictly the rules of the Cecil county farmer who gets the highest market price quoted. First, never mow down grass when there is a south or east wind, as we are located so close to the Atlantic and Gulf streams that this is certain to bring cloudy weather, if not rain in one day. You cannot make hay when cloudy. Select a day with west wind and you have nothing to fear. Do not start cutting in the morning until you can walk through the grass without getting your shoes wet, generally from 8 to 9 o'clock. If grass is heavy start the tedder one hour later, and at one o'clock, with a clear hot day commence raking and hauling in. If no rain is in sight and force enough, the mower can go on till 4 o'clock, and the hay taken in or heaped same day in perfect safety. It is a wrong impression that hay must be dry enough to rattle. Be sure their is no water in it and go ahead. Sap will not spoil hay, but cures it. Nature does not put any thing in grass to spoil it. It is the elements. Cut in the morning when the blades are full of water, and the grass lying down the air cannot dry it out, and hay goes in with moisture under the leaves and causes it to heat and burn.

HAY MAKER.

Private Mailing Cards.

Regulations Promulgated by the Postmaster-General.

Postmaster-General Smith issued last Friday a general order extending the privilege of private mailing cards to the full limit prescribed by the Universal Postal Union. The chief features of the new rules are as follows:

The quality of the cards must be substantially that of the Government postal cards and weigh about six pounds three ounces to the thousand. The cards may be of any color, and must bear these words at the top of the address side: "Private Mailing Card—Authorized by Act of Congress of May 19, 1898." ("Postal Card—Carte Postale"). The postage rate applicable to cards for the United States, Canada and Mexico is one cent: for other countries the rate is two cents.

The face of the card is reserved exclusively for postage stamps, postmarks and the address, which may be in writing, printing, by means of stamp, or by an adhesive label of not more than three-fourths of an inch by two inches in size. The sender may, in the same manner, indicate his name and address on the face or back of the card, and engravings and advertisements may be printed on the front if they do not interfere with a perfectly distinct address.

Quay Slates J. Hay Brown for Justice.

Slating for the Republican State nominations has been rather kaleidoscopic since ex-Senator Quay, in apparent despair of agreeing with his lieutenants on the selections, fled from the seashore to his son's farm to try to solve the problem in conclusion says the Phila. Record. Governor Stone's decision not to appoint a Supreme Justice until the convention shall present its nominee to him for that purpose disposes of Mr. Quay's thought of securing the appointment of Judge Pennypacker in advance of the convention. Developments since State Chairman Elkin's departure from Harrisburg for Atlantic City on Friday indicate a coming compromise between Quay and his lieutenants on the following slate:

Justice of the Supreme Court—J. Hay Brown, of Lancaster county.

Judge of the Superior Court—Josiah R. Adams, of Philadelphia.

State Treasurer — Lieutenant Colonel James E. Barnett, of Washington county.

Information of Quay's switching to Brown leaked out in Harrisburg on Friday and was corroborated among his lieutenants on Saturday there.

Mrs. George B. Barrow, the accomplice of her husband in the kidnapping of Marion Clark, the infant daughter of Arthur Clark, of New York, was sentenced yesterday to 12 years and 10 months imprisonment in the women's prison at Auburn. George Beauregard Barrow, her husband, was sentenced June 16 to 14 years and 10 months imprisonment. Bella Anderson, alias Carrie Jones, who plead guilty, got off with four years.

At a meeting of the York County Sesqui-Centennial General Committee in York Saturday evening, the celebration was definitely decided upon, and the program for the week arranged.

Some very marked improvments are to be made in the banking room of the National Bank, of Chambersburg. The work, which has been begun, will include the flooring, a pressed steel ceiling and very ornamental wainscoting.

Ten well-known merchants of Hagerstown, Md., are held in $100 bail each for the action of the grand Jury. They were arrested by Constable Jonas Rowland for selling without State or county license. It is said that one of the merchants has not had a State or county license for three years. A magistrate has no jurisdiction in the matter other than to fix bond for the action of the grand jury.

A RATHER curious fact is pointed out by the writer of an article in the July Century on "The Making of 'Robinson Crusoe.'" There are two monuments to Alexander Selkirk, it seems, and not a single one to Daniel Defoe: yet if Selkirk's adventures as a castaway had not been taken as the theme of the novelist's immortal story—the only English book that rivals "Pilgrim's Progress" in popularity—the present generation would probably never have known of the Scotch sailor's existence. One of the two monuments referred to is a statue at Selkirk's birthplace, Largo; the other is a tablet on the "Lookout," two thousand feet above the sea, on Juan Fernandez island.

Local and General.

Emanuel's Reformed church at Hampton, was rededicated on Sunday, the 18th, with appropriate ceremonies. Services at 9.45 a. m., were conducted by Rev. Dr. Geo. Stibitz, of York, and the services in the evening were conducted by Rev. Aaron Spangler, also of York. A large crowd of people were in attendance.

Rev. Bruce, a recent graduate of Dickinson College, Carlisle, has been appointed to supply the pulpit of the M. E. charge, Bendersville, made vacant by the recent death of Rev. E. Wonner, and preached his first sermon on Sunday.

John A. Livers, representing the Littlestown Electric Light, Heat and Power Co., appeared before the Town Council on Tuesday evening and offered the plant for sale to that borough. The matter was held over for consideration.

Rev. S. E. Herring Sunday morning a week ago preached his farewell sermon as pastor of the Third Lutheran church, Hanover.

One of the attractions at the Hanover Fair will probably be a firemen's tournament, arranged on an elaborate scale.

Henry L. Keagy, of Conowago township, makes a business of shipping young pigeons to New York City markets. Last year he killed and shipped 11,785 squabs.

J. Harvey Line, of Carlisle, was elected chairman of the Cumberland County Republican Committee, to succeed George N. Hays. Robert Smith, of Oakville, and John Uhrich, of Mechanicsburg, were chosen secretaries.

A few nights ago a new set of harness was stolen from John Eisenhart in Latimore township, near Masemer's Mill, and a set of harness from John H. Resser in Reading township, near the Bermudian churches.

Isaac Thomas, of Latimore township, met with an accident that will disable him for many weeks to come. Whilst attempting to work a colt in a wagon, he was by some means thrown down, the wagon passing over one of his limbs, fracturing both bones below the knee.

Senator Wellington says if the Navy Department keeps up its persecution of Admiral Schley, Maryland will cast its electoral votes for the Democratic candidate for President next year.

Rev. S. E. Herring and family, of Hanover, on Wednesday moved to York and are residing in their new home on West Poplar street. Rev. Herring has retired from the active work of the ministry after many years of service.

York Haven, York county, will soon begin operations in two new factories. In one heavy tarred paper will be manufactured, while the other (the old fibre chamois plant) will turn out paper bags by the million.

Andrew J. Jordan, proprietor and founder of the great cutlery works at Sheffield, England, who is on a short visit to Carroll county, Md., has signified to the School Board of that county his desire to erect a modern public school building and present it and about an acre of ground to the School Board as a gift. The building is to be at "Jordan's Retreat," near Denings, where Mr. Jordan's father and mother, Hiram and Margaret Jordan, resided for many years, and is to be a memorial to them. The school will be known as the "Hiram and Margaret Jordan School."

The 'coon captured by Joseph Bucher, of two Taverns, last Wednesday night in a trap, is supposed to be the animal which escaped from Edward Young, janitor of the new Gitt building, Hanover, a few weeks ago. Mr. Young had the 'coon in the cellar of the building, and it disappeared, taking with it a strap with a ring in it about the neck.

Prize fighting died in Pennsylvania a little over thirty-two years ago, says the Harrisburg Telegraph. In February of March of 1867 there was such a brutal affair between Sam. Colver and Charles McGlade, near Goldsboro, that public indignation was aroused, and the Legislature promptly passed an anti-prize-fighting law.

Michael Hennecke, who lives alone on a farm near West Fairview, Cumberland county, was brutally assaulted and robbed by several unknown men on Friday night a week ago. They left him bound to a bed after breaking three ribs and otherwise maltreating him. It is not known how much money was taken.

At Dillerville, near Lancaster, Harry Leachy drowned a litter of kittens, and in the evening he was surprised to find the old cat nursing five rabbits, which she had evidently found in the fields about Dillerville, and carried home.

The general committee of the Fourth of July celebration for Chester has completed the details for the biggest Fourth of July the city has ever had. Admiral Schley, who will be the guest of Colonel A. K. McClure, at Wallingford, has accepted an invitation to be present at the park, and will make an address.

Nelson A. Miles, the Major General commanding the United States army, will in all probability, be given the post he has ardently sought—that of commanding officer of the Philippine forces.

The Berks county Grand Jury recently returned not true bills in all the indictments against the four employes of the Reading Railway, who, it was alleged, by neglect of their duties caused the wreck at Exeter on the night of May 13, when 29 lives were lost.

The call extended by the Chambersburg Falling Springs Presbyterian Church to Rev. M. J. McLeod, of Chester, will likely be declined by that gentleman.

Arthur T. Goldsborough, of Wesley Heights, near Washington, has presented Secretary of Agriculture Wilson with six strawberries, and they filled a quart box. The largest berry weighed four ounces and was ten and one-half inches in circumference.

The Standard Oil Company is preparing to get out of Ohio. Its headquarters will be removed from Cleveland to New York, and on July 1 its Ohio charter will be given up. The office force will be reduced from about sixty men to less than one-tenth of that number. The recent incorporation of the company in New Jersey, with a capital of $110,000,000, was the first step in the abandonment of Ohio.

Fifteen-year-old Mary Burke, of Chambersburg, made a narrow escape from death Wednesday night on the balcony of the Wagaman building, that place. She was on the balcony with some friends, and in leaning over to look down on the street caught hold of an uncovered electric wire. Her screams attracted hundreds of people to the place. A sister, who was standing with her, attempted to drag her away from her perilous position and had her hands badly burned by touching her body. Samuel Wagaman succeeded in dragging the girl away from the wire. She was badly burned about the hands, and Wagaman was severely shocked in making the rescue.

Twenty-eight post-offices in as many States have been named Dewey after the hero of Manila. This is only four less than those named after Washington. Over 300 other applications are on the postal files. Seventy new Tennessee offices have asked for the name.

Daniel Rice, of Little Germany, Perry county, shipped to eastern furriers recently the pelts of 75 foxes, 80 minks, 6 wildcats, 100 opossums, 100 skunks and 1,000 muskrats.

It is understood that Admiral Cevera is coming back to the United States to superintend the removal of the bodies of the Spanish sailors now buried at the Portsmouth Navy Yard for reburial in Spain.

The home of the late Levi K. Brown, Goshen, Lancaster county, was recently captured by a swarm of honey bees for the second time since 1827. The bee took possession of a space between the ceiling of the sitting room and floor of a bed chamber above by entering through a hole in the wall. The swarm was a large one and coming from the south end after alighting on the wall, soon entered the hole and commenced house-keeping and honey-making. In 1857 the same place was occupied by a colony of bees, which remained two years.

Orders have been issued from the headquarters of the National Guard directing Company I, Eighth Regiment, of Wrightsville, and Company I, Fourteenth Regiment, of Elizabeth, to disband for failure to reinstate themselves in the Guard after the muster out of the volunteer service. Company H, Eleventh Regiment, of Harrisburg, will take the place of the Wrightsville company. No assignment has been made to take the place of the Elizabeth company.

Colonel Guffey has won a convert since the State Democratic convention. The Latrobe Advance says he showed himself a true Democrat in not giving any intimation as to his personal choice for Judge, and adds: "We have never personally followed the Guffey wing of the Democratic party, but we are heartily in accord with Colonel James M. Guffey since he has shown his devotion to his party and his ability to rise above the plane of the boss to the high place of the real leader. His present place is a new one in Pennsylvania politics and his power in his party is now unlimited. The Advance has never fought against leaders, but it has no time for bosses and now with a leader who is not a boss we look for the regeneration of Pennsylvania's Democracy."

The horse occupies a unique position in the State of Pennsylvania. If it is stolen the county commissioners must pay a reward of $20 for the arrest of the thief unless the capture is made by an officer with a warrant for his arrest. No other property is protected in this way. No reward is provided by law for the arrest of a cow thief, or a chicken thief, or a bank robber, or any sort of a thief. No special inducement is even offered for the arrest of a murderer, unless the commissioners see fit to do so. But they have no choice in the capture of a horse thief.

John Heindel, a veteran of the civil war, who was wounded in the battle of Gettysburg, came to his death at Yorkana, this county, last Friday by strangulation. A large piece of tripe which he was eating lodged in his windpipe and caused death in a few minutes.—Hanover Record.

D. Newton Fahrney, son of David P. Fahrney, and a member of the firm of D. P. Fahrney & Sons, died at his home in Hagerstown at 9 o'clock Saturday morning as the result of having taken an overdose of morphia.

By an act of the last Congress the Commissioner of Pensions is authorized in cases where a soldier has abondoned his family for six months or longer to pay one-half of his pension to his wife or guardian of the minor children of such pensioner. Many deserted wives are making application for the benefit of the law.

Returns of the assessors show that there are 2,228 bicycles in Franklin county. Chambersburg has 522, Waynesboro 315, Greencastle 68, Mercersburg 27, Antrim township 215, Washington 131, Quincy 121.

A feature of the $6,000,000 improvments which are to be made to the National Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., will be the erection of a handsome new chapel to be known as the Maine Memorial Chapel. Plans for the structure have just been completed by Ernest Flagg and have been accepted by the Government.

At a recent meeting of the directors of the Waynesboro and Pen-Mar Trolley Company, Civil Engineer J. Reilly Weaver submitted profiles and estimates of the two routes under consideration. The advantages seemed greatly in favor of the pike route, and that was adopted by unanimous vote. The finance committee, which was reorganized with B. F. Welty as chairman, was instructed to open the subscription books at once and to proceed to place $50,000 worth of stock. As soon as this amount is subscribed, it is the intention of the company to begin the grading and push the work ahead to completion. The balance of the money required to complete the road—$100,000—has been guaranteed by Baltimore capitalists, who have agreed to take bonds to that amount.

Mrs. Craft's head does not trouble her any more and she feels better than she has for three years.

Mrs. Lydia Craft, of Larwood, Linn Co., Oreg., writes: "I was sick for a long time with female trouble but paid little attention to it until last winter, I miscarried and this left me in a very weak condition. I grew very nervous and despondent. I had such a disagreeable feeling in my head; my head was hot and painful. I had bearing down pains and my back hurt me all the time. I could not do any work and could not sleep. I tried some patent medicine but got no relief. I went to see the best doctor in Lebanon. He said I had inflammation of the feminine organs. I wrote to Dr. Pierce, and in due time received an encouraging letter, advising me to take his 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' They helped me steadily. I could see that I was gaining. When I wrote to you I weighed eighty-seven pounds, I now weigh ninety-nine: I can eat anything I want to, my appetite is good. I can work all day and not feel tired at night. I have no more bearing-down pains."

"My head was hot and painful."

Suffering women everywhere should write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and receive his advice, free of cost.

For over thirty years Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. On the staff of this great institution are nearly a score of regularly graduated, skilled, experienced physicians, each of whom is a specialist in the treatment of some one group of diseases. It is the greatest establishment of its kind in the whole world.

When a boy turns his bulging pocket inside out we marvel at the quantity and variety of articles he has stowed away. Odd lengths of string, marbles, a horse-chestnut, a top, brass nails, hickory-nuts, an apple, and many more articles are garnered by this "snapper up of unconsidered trifles." We think the collection must be hard on a boy's pocket. And it is. But do we ever think of the variety and miscellany of the substances we put into the pocket of our stomach? There's the apple and the nuts, and things besides quite as indigestible as brass nails and with no more food value than so many marbles. And yet we wonder that the stomach "gives out." When the stomach breaks down under the strain of careless eating and irregular meals it can be perfectly and permanently restored to health and strength by the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The action of this medicine on the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition is so marked, that relief from disease is at once experienced, and the headaches, liver "troubles," kidney disorders, skin eruptions and other symptoms of a diseased stomach are quickly cured. Whenever the use of a laxative medicine is indicated, use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They act in harmony with the "Discovery" and assist its action by purging the bowels of foul accumulations.

Match-less Suit Goods.

And we say matchless with a double meaning—matchless in beauty as well as in price. We cannot claim a patent on beautiful Suit Materials, the markets of the world are open to all—nor can we alone quote low prices; but considering Styles, Quality and Prices as a unit, we doubt if they are equalled.

Miscellaneous.

The individual communion cup system having been decided upon by St. James Lutheran congregation, a set has been received, through Mr. C. A. Blocher. It consists of 10 trays of 36 glasses each. The Communion announced to take place in this church on Sunday, July 2, has been postponed to the 9th, with preparatory services on the 8th.

The promoters of the new York Springs railroad, between Dillsburg York county, and York Springs are confident, it is said, of a speedy termination of the legal difficulty with the Reading.

Arrangements for the Reformed church reunion at Pen-Mar, July 20th, are completed. Addresses will be made by Rev. Dr. G. W. Stibitz, of York; Rev. Dr. C. J. Musser, of Philadelphia; D. C. H. Hubert, of Baltimore, and Miss Mary Hollowell, of Japan. A special choir from Baltimore has been secured.

William F. Dill, Esq., recently admitted to the Bar, has his office in the new Masonic Building, Center Square.

The Grocers and Importers Association, of Philadelphia, numbering about 150 in all, in charge of Benjamin J. Reiff, visited Gettysburg Thursday and Friday of last week, stopping at the Eagle.

The meeting of the State Teachers' Association which convenes in Gettysburg July 4th, promises to bring here quite a large crowd of people. Those who have the convention in charge are eminent educators of the State, and those who will make the addresses are said to be distinguished men in their various lines. The convention will be of interest, therefore, to the people of Adams county generally, as well as to the teachers.

The body of Frank Cummings, of Co. D, 19th Regulars, one of the two young men who were killed in a shooting accident at Camp Meade on the 13th, was buried in the National Cemetery here last Tuesday.

An increase of pension, $6 to $8, has been granted to John Leathery, Bermudian, an original widow's to Lydia Ann Goulden, Granite Hill, $8, and a restoration and increase, $2 to $14, to Mathias Noel, New Oxford.

Charles A. Beck, of W. Middle street, received word last Thursday that his wife, who is employed in Philadelphia, had met with a serious bicycle accident in that city on Wednesday. It seems that the wheel she was riding collided with a passing wagon, under which Mrs. Beck was thrown. She is recovering.

A party of Gettysburgians, consisting of Dr. Henry Stewart, Messrs. Harry Young, C. K. Gilbert, Jr., Geo. F. Young, Maurice Miller, J. Frank Meals and Chas. W. Myers, are camping along the Monocacy, near Harney. They expect to be gone until Friday. Geo. Brown, of the Eagle Hotel, is cook.

Prof. P. D. W. Hankey, manager of the Electric Railway, is to be complimented on several improvements he is making, among them the systematic running of the cars. At present three cars are in use and one of them can be depended upon to pass a given point every twenty minutes.

At the Epworth League on Sunday evening the subject will be "Our Country for Christ" (Christian Citizenship Meeting), and the leader S. A. Hammond.

W. H. Wierman expects to fit up two store rooms and build a new front to the Duncan property, Baltimore street.

Chas. S. Duncan, Esq., is contemplating some improvements to his building, corner of Centre Square and York street, by enlarging Lieberman's store room, and making other alterations.

Pen-Mar excursion season opens to-day and excursions will be run on the W. M. Railroad every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday during the season, as usual.

A goodly number of people were in the pews of the Presbyterian church Thursday evening to see the stereopticon views on old Testament History. About 50 pictures, illustrative of Bible History from the time of the entering of the Children of Israel into the Holy Land to the division of the Kingdom, were shown and explained by Rev. D. W. Woods. The views and explanations were very instructive and profitable to all present.

S. G. Spangler is improving his property, corner E. Middle and Stratton streets, with the addition of a two-story back building.

The subject for Rev. D. W. Wood's discourse next Sunday evening will be "Truest Patriotism."

The W. M. R. R brought two excursions to Gettysburg last Saturday, one from Martinsburg, W. Va, Brunswick and Cumberland, Md., conveying 250, and one from Baltimore with 150 passengers.

A Salvation Camp-meeting will be held in Marks Bream's grove at the cross-roads between Trostle's Mill and Eichelberger's store, Ariosa, commencing Saturday, July 1st, and continuing over three Sundays. The meetings will be in charge of Evangelists Chas. Boltz and wife, of Mechanicsburg, Pa.

On and after Saturday, 24th inst., through cars between Philadelphia and Gettysburg will be attached to trains leaving Reading Terminal, Philadelphia, 8.36 a. m. and Gettysburg 4.35 p. m.

A new pavement is being laid in front of St. James Lutheran church and parsonage.

The Hand of Death.

On Friday morning at her home on Middle street, Mrs. Henry Dustman, widow of the late Caspar Henry Dustman, died after a lingering illness from cancer. The deceased was born near Berlin, Germany, and emigrated to this country at the age of 18, settling in York. She remained there for a few years and then moved to Gettysburg where she has since resided.

The deceased was 64 years, 7 months and 21 days of age. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Samuel Hartzell, of Gettysburg Another daughter, Mrs. C. C. Sefton, died some time ago.

The funeral took place Sunday afternoon from the late residence on Middle street, Rev. A. R. Steck conducting the services. Interment was in Evergreen Cemetery. Messrs. Jacob Kitzmiller, William Frock, John Shelleman and Joseph Riggs were the pall bearers.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

Children's Day exercises were held in St. James Lutheran church last Sunday. The program consisted of responsive readings, scripture readings and music. Rev. A. R. Steck delivered an appropriate address on "The Relation of Children to the Church." The following music was rendered: "Father, O hear us," by Misses Martha Sachs, Ivy Tawney and Carrie Rupp; "Out in the Golden Sunshine," by school and congregation; "In the Field," by Misses Edna Ziegler, Bessie Fissel, Bessie Burger and Nellie Blocher; quartette, "Master's Work," by Miss Minnie Spangler, Messrs. Geo. Stallsmith, Harold Lewars and David Deatrick; "Give, Give, Willingly Give" and "The Bright Forever," by the school and congregation." The offering address was made by Master John Sachs.

Notice.—Dealers in fire works are notified that no sky rockets shall be sold or shot off on July 2, 3, 4, or any time, under a penalty of five dollars, fine and costs.

Hack licenses are now due and any person or persons hacking after June 22, 1899, will be prosecuted.

THE REYNOLDS MONUMENT.

TO BE UNVEILED NEXT SATURDAY—FACTS CONNECTED WITH IT.

Next Saturday afternoon, July 1st, at 2 o'clock the ceremonies incident to the unveiling of the handsome equestrian statue erected to the memory of Major General John Fulton Reynolds will take place. The statue is not placed where General Reynolds fell, but is situated on the Chambersburg Pike, a short distance north of Reynolds Grove.

The plinth is polished granite, and the statue at its base measures 5 feet 6 inches by 14 feet. General Reynolds is seated on a horse, and is seen looking into the distance. The horse is as if in motion, and the General, in an easy attitude, is holding the reins with his left hand, while his right is buried in the folds of his coat. The statue is about sixteen feet high, and, with the plinth, is somewhat over thirty feet in height. In modeling the figure the sculptor had the advantage of a study of General Reynolds' army equipments that are in possession of his sister, Mrs. Henry B. Landis, of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, who loaned them to help him in his work.

The statue is the work of H. K. Bush-Brown, of New York, and it cost $20,000. It is erected by the State of Pennsylvania, and is one of three equestrian monuments provided for by Legislative appropriation of May, 1891. Those to Generals Meade and Hancock were dedicated July 5, 1896, as will be remembered.

The day will be the event of the season in Battlefield lines and it is expected that quite a large number of prominent military men will be present. A large platform has been erected and the arrangements in detail completed.

Cheat in the Wheat.

The large amount of cheat in the wheat this year has given rise to a great deal of speculation as to what cheat is, and we have carefully looked over quite a large lot of agricultural year-books, reports and pamphlets for some information about it, but have been so unfortunate as to find but little.

The general supposition is that cheat is the product of an injured, defective grain of wheat, but by what process the character of the plant is changed is not explained.

Poor seed, of which there was a great deal in Adams county last year owing to the injury done the previous crop by the Fly, will, it is claimed, produce cheat, but that is a view which does not appear to be tenable.

Dr. William Darlington, President of the Chester County Cabinet of Natural Science, in a book "Plants of Chester county," published a number of years ago says under the head—Bromus, cheat or chess:

This well-known, troublesome grass, is a naturalized foreigner; and obstinately accompanies our crops of Wheat and Rye Frequently where the wheat has been injured by the winter, or other causes, the Bromus is very abundant; and many farmers imagine the wheat has been transformed into Bromus, or Cheat. This error also prevails among the husbandmen of Europe. But in the old world, they think the wheat is transmuted into Lolium temulentum, or Darnel—quite a distinct grass from Bromus, and which is yet rare in the United States.

Other writers take the same position, and we believe it safe to assume that cheat is only a species of grass, which grows most abundantly where the stand of wheat is poorest.

Base Ball.

The local team opened the season on Saturday on Nixon Field by defeating Carlisle by a score of 10 to 1. Plank, the local pitcher, seemed to have the Carlisle team completely at his mercy, as they made only two hits off of his delivery. The home team found Bell an easy mark and won with ease. The game played by Gettysburg was very creditable and was deserving of a much larger audience. A better turn-out next time would encourage the team to do good work. The following composed the team: Robbin Wolf, c; E Plank, p.; H. Harper, 1st b.; G. Griffith, 2d b.; A. Minnigh, 3d b.; P. Tate, Capt., s. s.; W. F. Dill, lf.; E McCammon, cf.; F. McCammon, rf. A series of seven games has been arranged with the McSherrystown team, the winner of the series to claim the championship of Adams county, the first game to be played at McSherrystown on Saturday.

Two games will be played on the home grounds next Tuesday, July 4th, with the Paxtang Club, of Harrisburg.

McSherrystown's base ball club easily defeated the Keystones, of Chambersburg, on the former's grounds Friday afternoon before a large crowd by the score of 11 to 3.

VOTE OF THANKS.

While a party of cyclers of the Stockton Wheelmen's Club, of Camden, N. J., were riding along the Baltimore pike, about three miles south of Gettysburg, on Sunday, May 28th, two of their number, T. M. Richards and A. Rutherford, were thrown from a tandem and severely injured. They were brought to the Globe Hotel, Gettysburg, and Dr. J. R. Dickson was called in to render the necessary aid. The following vote of thanks has been received from the Club:

"Elias Fissel,

"Dear Sir:—I am instructed by the Stockton Wheelmen to extend to you our most hearty thanks for the care and attendance bestowed upon our members during our visit to your historic city.

"Yours respectfully,
"F. Wm. E. Cullingford,
"Secretary.

"Kindly hand inclosed to physician, as we do not know his name or address.—C."

HORSE KILLED BY TRAIN.

The W. M. R. R. east-bound freight last Friday morning struck and killed a valuable bay mare belonging to Wm. P. Wentz. The animal had gotten out of the field, we understand, and was close to the track when the train approached. It became frightened and ran on the track just as the train approached the bridge over Rock creek. It was caught and was pushed the entire length of the bridge before it fell off. When found its front legs were broken and its head crushed. The horse was valued at $100 by Mr. Wentz.

John L. Kendlehart, Esq., was appointed Commissioner to take testimony in the divorce proceeding of Mattie A. Huber vs. Samuel S. Huber.

Rule on Anthony Housel to show cause why return of Sheriff's sale of real estate of Harry L. Mause made to Anthony Housel stand not to be amended so as to be sold to J. L. Williams, Esq., made absolute, and amendment made.

In Jacob Minter vs. Geo. G. Plank, motion for judgment, judgment entered for $1,143.

After counting the vote the Court certified that by a majority vote of 31 in Bendersville borough the debt was determined to be increased. The resolutions on which the vote was taken reads as follows:

Whereas, The borough of Bendersville is laboring under a great disadvantage and inconvenience by reason of not having a proper and sufficient water supply for the safety, convenience and necessity of its citizens and having no fund, with which to introduce the same into said Borough, therefore be it

Resolved, That the borough of Bendersville increase its indebtedness to the amount not exceeding $5,000 for the purpose of introducing a water supply into said Borough and issue bonds for the payment of the same in denominations of $1,000 each clear of all taxes, guaranteed under the provisions of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and Acts of Assembly, thereof—bearing interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually on the 1st day of March and the 1st day of September of each and every year, dated September 1st, 1899, and to be redeemed at the pleasure of the Borough in seven years, and payable in 20 years from date.

1. That the amount of the proposed increase is $5,000.

2. That the amount of the last assessed valuation of taxable property within the said borough of Bendersville, subject to borough tax, is $81,781.00.

3. That the amount of the existing debt is nothing.

4. That the per centum of the proposed increase is 7 per centum of the taxable property subject to borough tax.

Impure Water the Trouble.

The death of six horses belonging to Merville E. Stallsmith recently having caused some public comment a quantity of the water which the horses drank was taken by Dr. Marshall, who was here representing the State in the investigation of the case, with him to Philadelphia, on his return, for analysis. The State Veterinarian, Dr. Leonard Pearson, has written to Dr. Moriarity, as follows:

Philadelphia, June 21, '99.

Dear Doctor:

Analysis of the water brought back by Dr. C. J. Marshall has shown it to contain a large quantity of chlorine and nitrogen, and the chemist reports it unfit for use. It is quite likely that this has something to do with the outbreak of spinal meningitis among Mr. Stallsmith's horses. The loss in this case has been very great. I believe that it is always well to remove horses with spinal meningitis from the premises where the disease originates as soon as possible and also to remove all other horses that have been exposed in the same way. There is no evidence that the disease is transmissible from horse to horse and everything points to the probability of infection from food or water. Yours truly,

Leonard Pearson.

—It is believed that the water was contaminated in this case by liquid from the barnyard.

June 24.—During the heavy thunder storm last Tuesday evening, the lightening struck Hon. Wm. A. Martin's barn on the home farm. It shattered one of the corner posts and knocked off some weather boarding. Two of the daughters who were under the overshoot of the barn milking were badly stunned and three of the mules in the stable were knocked down. Otherwise it did no damage.

The lightning also knocked out the phone in Hon. Francis Cole's house at Wood Lawn Terrace.

Last Friday H. W. Trostle lost a valuable young cow. She accidently got to a bucket of shorts that was mixed with paris green to kill potatoe bugs.

The prospect is for a large crop of shellbarks this season.

Geo. Oyler has his new house ready for the plasterers.

Owing to the heavy rain last Sunday morning the Children's Day Exercises in the Reformed church were postponed until next Sunday noon at 2 p. m, July 2.

Owing to the late soaking rains the prospect is good for a large crop of the early planted potatoes. P.

A NEW ORGANIZATION.

The Apostleship of Prayer in league with the Sacred Heart was inaugurated in St. Francis Xavier church on Sunday afternoon by Rev. Francis X. Brady, S. J., of Baltimore. Father Brady explained at all the services on Sunday the nature and object of this spiritual organization. He invited all who desired to become promoters of this devotion to meet in Xavier Hall at 3 p. m. In respone to his invitation the hall was crowded with the members, men and women, of the congregation. Thirty promoters were appointed. Every one of these promoters selects 10 names, which are formed into bands.

After another address by Father Brady the meeting was adjourned, all expressing themselves delighted with the organization.

Father Brady preached a very instructive sermon on "Individual and Collective Influences."

Marriage.

A large number of invited guests assembled in the Presbyterian church Wednesday morning to witness the marriage of Mr. George W. Loudon, of Altoona, to Miss Clara S. Cobean, of this place.

Promptly at 10 o'clock the ushers, Messrs. John Keith, of Gettysburg, Ralph Reifsnider, of Westminster, and Lewis and Howard Young, of Middletown, entered the church from the rear and proceeded to the altar, followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Sarah Loudon, sister of the groom, and Miss Martha Cobean, sister of the bride, the maid of honor, Miss Emma Jamison, of Baltimore, and the bride. They were met at the altar by the groom and best man, Mr. George Cobean, brother of the bride, when Rev. D. W. Woods in a short, but impressive ceremony, united them in the holy bonds of matrimony.

The bride was dressed in mousseline-de-soie over white valoir, and carried Bride's roses. The maid of honor wore white swies over white silk and carried pink roses. The bridesmaids were gowned in white and blue silk under mousseline-de-soie, respectively.

The organist, Mr. John Cobean, rendered appropriate music while the guests were assembling and as the bridal party entered he played Lohengrin's wedding march. The party left the church to the strains of Mendlessohn's march.

The presents were handsome and numerous, among which might be mentioned an oxidized silver water pitcher, a silver tea service, a handsome onyx clock mounted with bronze, a cut glass water set, cut glass dishes, silver knives and forks, etc. Those present from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Teuper, of Harrisburg; Charles Mathias and sister, Miss Anna, of Waynesboro; Edward Loudon, of Altoona, and James Young, of Middletown.

Mr. Loudon is well known here, having been a student at the College for the past three years.

After the ceremony a reception was given at the bride's home to a large number of invited guests.

The newly-wedded couple left on the 11.05 a. m. train for Philadelphia and other places of interest. After their honeymoon trip they will reside in Altoona, where Mr. Loudon will enter into business with his father.

Surprise Party.

Tuesday evening, June 20, a very pleasant surprise was given at the home of Mr. G. Y. Hemler, of Mountpleasant township, in honor of Mrs. Hemler, it being the sixtieth anniversary of her birthday.

The surprise was complete. Mr. Hemler had gone to the land of dreams, while Mrs. Hemler was busily engaged in finishing some household duties before retiring. Both were agreeably surprised to see so many of their friends and neighbors. The evening was spent in a very entertaining manner. The principal amusements were vocal and instrumental music, dancing, social chat and selections from Edison's great invention, the Graphophone, conducted by Rev. Father Martin.

After indulging in the above named amusements for some time the crowd was ushered into the dining room where a table ladened with the delicacies of the season awaited them.

At a good hour of the night the company departed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Hemler many more happy birth-day anniversaries. Among those present were Rev. Father Martin, G. Y. Hemler wife and family, Louise, Jerome, George and Harry, G. F. Smith and wife, Jno. C. Hemler, wife and daughter, F. X Smith and wife, Henry J. Hemler and wife, Fred Thorn and wife, Augustus Little and wife, Chas. Strasbaugh, wife and daughter, Gregory Smith and wife, Joseph Colgan and wife, Lincoln Trostle, wife and children, Jno. Frommeyer and wife, Edgar Smith, Jerome Gulden and wife, John Geesey and wife, Jacob Staub, wife and child, E. R. WHERE REYNOLDS FELL.

BY J. C. ROSENGARTEN,

CAPTAIN AND AIDE-DE-CAMP ON THE STAFF OF GENERAL REYNOLDS, ORDNANCE OFFICER FIRST CORPS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

[The following was written in connection with the erection of the monument, dedicated July 1st, 1886, which marks the spot where General Reynolds fell. Its publication now will be of interest to our readers, in view of the unveiling of the new Reynolds monument to take place next Saturday, although we cannot vouch for the accuracy of all of its statements:]

The State of Pennsylvania, by an act approved July 3, 1885, appropriated the sum of $1,000 for a suitable tablet to mark the spot where General John F. Reynolds fell at the battle of Gettysburg. This recognition of the important services rendered by Reynolds is heartily welcomed by his soldiers. The heroic bronze statue erected by his old First Corps stands in the cemetery at Gettysburg, and fitly marks the spot selected by Reynolds for the concentration of the Army of the Potomac under General Meade. The equestrian statue of Reynolds in Philadelphia is significant of the debt due him and his comrades for the safety of the metropolis of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in successfully driving back the invaders of the State. But the spot where Reynolds fell well deserves to be marked, and the State wisely entrusted the duty to its own Adjutant General and to the Corporal Skelly Post, of the Grand Army of the Republic, at Gettysburg. Corporal Skelly, after whom this post is named, was a native of Gettysburg, who fell at Winchester, while the young lady to whom he was engaged to be married, Miss Jennie Wade, was the only woman killed in Gettysburg, and, dying, neither knew of the death of the other. Their names are very dear to the people of Gettysburg, and the members of the post have always been steadfast in doing their share to preserve and perpetuate the memorials of the battle which has made their town immortal. The Post Committee consists of Sergeant Wilson, superintendent of the National Cemetery; Sergeant Holtzworth, the genial guide and universal authority on the battlefield, and John M. Krauth, son of the venerable president of the Theological Seminary, in whose vicinity the first day's battle was fought. In their hands, and with the supervision of the Adjutant General and his officers, the State will be safe in securing a fitting memorial to mark the spot where Reynolds fell. Already the ground over which the battle was fought, from Willoughby's Run in the extreme advance, to Little Round-Top on the left, and Culp's Hill on the right, has been secured by the Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Association, and tablets mark the spot where Colonel Fred Taylor, brother of Bayard Taylor, fell, and where Zook, of the Second Corps, and Marvin and Chapman, of the 26th, and General Strong Vincent gave up their lives. Regimental memorials have been put in position by the 27th and 72d, 68th and 91st, 93d, 88th, 106th, 153d and 118th Pennsylvania, by the 124th New York, a life-size granite statue of its colonel, Ellis, by Battery B, of the 1st Pennsylvania Artillery; by the 17th, the 14th, the 27th and the 20th Connecticut; by the 2d, the 9th, the 5th, the 12th, the 13th, the 18th, the 10th, the 7th Massachusetts, and by the 1st, 3d and 9th Massachusetts Batteries; by the 12th New Jersey; by the 7th and 27th Indiana, and by the 3d Indiana Cavalry, and by Gregg's cavalry division at Rummell's Farm. State and regimental organizations are now earnestly engaged in this task, thus securing a permanent record on the very spot where their comrades fell, and the national monument in the National Cemetery will soon be encircled by a long array of memorials on all parts of the field. Most of them are very modest in their proportions, but all are distinguished by the fitness of the design to the purpose. Thus from the spot to be marked by the memorial tablet where Reynolds fell there is in sight the memorials of the regiments which were in his command and nearest him at the time. The history of the battle can be read by every visitor as he moves along the lines marked by these stone records, and the survivors of the soldiers who fought there can easily find the point at which he and his comrades met the foe. The story of the battle will thus be told by those who shared its hardships and its glories in all time to come.

The story of Reynolds' first day's battle at Gettysburg has never been told as fully as it ought to be; it was the preliminary skirmish of a great contest, and in the overwhelming importance of the final result, the details and the successive events of the opening engagement have been hastily passed over. It has often been hinted, rather than asserted, that Reynolds was the victim of his own rashness, that he heedlessly and impetuously engaged the enemy in an overwhelming force, and was not ready to open battle nor right in doing so. Against this it is enough to repeat General Meade's assertion that he meant to engage the enemy whenever and wherever he could find him.

Heth's skirmishers got into the cover of the woods with their heavy underbrush and thickets, and while the Iron Brigade swept down to and even across the creek the rebel skirmishers made an easy prey of Reynolds as he returned from the line of battle to find fresh troops. He fell just as he was in sight of his men hurrying to his aid. A triangle of woods, the apex fronting on Seminary Ridge and the Theological Seminary, which gives its name, separated by a swale or hollow, the base on Willoughby Run, the sides sloping, one, the Easternmost, toward the Chambersburg Pike, the other, the Westernmost, toward the Millersburg road, still marks the centre of the Union line on the first day. General Doubleday aptly likens it to a natural position, the key to a whole line of defensive works. Even the lapse of over twenty years has not made much change in the natural features. A new road opened to the new Springs Hotel makes the access to this part of the line still more easy, while the generous gift of Reynolds' Grove by the Messrs. Whitney, owners of the Springs and the hotel, to the Battlefield Memorial Association secures its permanent possession. The line of battle is marked by memorial tablets of many of the regiments—cavalry, infantry and artillery—engaged under Reynolds, and now the State of Pennsylvania, by placing a tablet on the spot where Reynolds fell, fixes the centre from which the whole line was developed, both to the right and the left. Nothing can be more impressive than the sight of these scattered memorials, marking like milestones the distance which separated the regiments forming the Union force on the field of the battle of Gettysburg. From all states, of all kinds and dimensions, varying in design according to the strength of the associations, many embody the action of some heroic soldier, such as the standard-bearer of the 12th Massachusetts, others simply the regimental record, and others again that of brigade, division and corps. The State's tablet will fitly mark the spot by the simple inscription, "Here Reynolds Fell," and to it all future visitors, soldiers and civilians will turn as they recalled the scenes that made Gettysburg famous as the turning point of the great Rebellion.

WINTER WHEAT A FAILURE.

Charles A. Pillsbury, of Minneapolis, makes the following statement in regard to the wheat situation:

"I look upon the winter wheat crop as practically a failure. The winter wheat section of the country has not, from all appearances, raised any more wheat than we need here at home for our own consumption. So far as the Northwest spring wheat area is concerned, the crop is looking and doing fairly well. With favorable weather conditions from this time forward there ought not to be any reason why we should not have up here a reasonably abundant crop"

IMPROVING VARIETIES.

CHANGES IN PLANTS EFFECTED BY SEED SELECTION---EFFECTS OF MANURE ON CROPS.

There are many facts which come under the daily observation of farmers which are unnoticed, but careful study of the details incident to all farm operations would make plain many matters which would lead to changes in methods. Each farm is a small world and field for observation, because it differs from the ones adjoining. The system best adapted for one might lead to failure on another. But there are some principles of farming which are applicable everywhere and cannot be ignored. As Professor Robinson, of Canada, has so truthfully stated, what farmers need is a clear understanding of principles, and not a dose of prescriptions to guide their practice. Cultivation is an effective means of controlling the moisture of the soil at a depth at which ordinary farm crop seeds are planted. Examinations of farms in the spring on land sown to grain has shown that in clear weather the temperature was three degrees higher to a depth of three inches on land that had been rolled than on unrolled land. The conditions for the increase in the size of the roots, stems and leaves are not the same for an increase in the grains, fruits or seeds. An excess of easily-available plant food promotes great growth and enlargement of the vegetative parts of the plants—roots, stems and leaves—while a bareness of available plant food when the plant is near the ripening period makes for an increase in the quantities of seeds. This may be noticed by the heavy growth of oats on a manure head, the stems and leaves being large, while the heads contain very few seeds, while a grass plant by the roadside—short and small—will carry a great number of seeds, the seeds constituting a large proportion of the total weight of the plant. These results, however, depend upon many conditions which are not always observed and the causes are frequently not well understood by farmers.

EFFECTS OF ROTATION.

The increase in the sizes of different portions of a plant—the vegetative and reproductive parts—are governed by the kinds of fertilizer and manure and their periods of application. Barnyard manure should be applied to crops in which the roots, stems, and leaves are sought for, such as turnips, carrots, mangels, corn fodder, hay and grasses, but manure should not be applied direct to land for the growth of cereals, but should be on land for the crop which precedes the cereal crop. Manure applied to grass lands benefits the crop, and if the plot is used for corn, wheat or oats the following year the product of grain will be larger than when the manure is applied on the grain crop the year it is grown, though the amount of fodder may not be so large.

By thus rotating the crops the manure performs better service, because the plant food left over one year by certain crops will be taken up by a different crop the next year. Results may not be apparent when but a small quantity of manure is used, as there may be an insufficient for any kind of crop, and, as the texture of the soil, its cultivation, etc., are matters which enter into consideration, the farmer should experiment on his farm with small plots in order to determine for himself what his land requires and how best to utilize the manure which he produces. It is true that with the liberal use of manure a single kind of crop can be profitably grown on the same field for many years in succession, but it will be found that by rotating the crops the land will give larger profits and the cost to maintain fertility will be largely reduced, as rotation is nature's method of recuperating the soil.

SELECTION OF SEED.

Seeds which germinate quickly are the best, and heavy seeds give more vigorous and heavier crops than smaller seeds. All plants have a tendency to variation, and when changed from one place to another make an effort to adapt themselves to the new conditions. Those which succeed most fully in adapting themselves are the best for that locality, and whenever seeds are sown in a locality there will be variations brought about by tillage, climate crossings, etc. Selection of these seeds is the only mode of improvement. A comparison of varieties without the continued selection of seeds is of no value. At the Canadian Experiment Station selected large peas were sown to themselves, and the large peas of the crop again selected for three years the results being the obtaining of peas twice as heavy as a crop grown from ordinary seeds of the same variety. The selection of seeds, of barley, oats and spring wheat showed a large increase in yields, due to selection only. The selection of seeds must be from individual plants, which give evidence of power by succeeding and yielding largely under soil and climatic conditions where the crop is to be grown the following year. In every field of grain some plants are more vigorous than the others, which shows that such plants have varied in the right direction. When the young corn of this year is growing the Canadian plan should be adopted. Go into the field and watch the young stalks, mark them by fastening strings to them, observe them to maturity, compare the ears and select for seed the best. The same may apply to other grains, and even vegetables may be selected. In three or four years there may be a gain of from 10 to 30 per cent. in the yield, which will be the turning point perhaps, between profit and loss.—Phila. Record.

BE INDEPENDENT.

You can tell just as well as a physician whether your Kidneys are diseased or healthy. Fill a tumbler with urine and let it stand 24 hours; if it has a sediment, if it is milky or cloudy, discolored or pale; if it is ropy or stringy, your Kidneys and Bladder are in a dangerous condition and you do not need a physician to tell you so.

Kidney diseases should be attended to at once, for almost 90 per cent. of our unexpected deaths of to-day are from that cause. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the only sure cure known for diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Bladder and Blood, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia and Chronic Constipation. It is marvelous how it stops that pain in the back, relieves the necessity of urinating so often at night, drives away that scalding pain in passing water, corrects the bad effects of whiskey and beer and shows its beneficial effects on the system in an incredibly short time. It is sold by all drug stores at $1.00 a bottle.

If you would like to test Favorite Remedy free of all charge, send your full name and post office address to the DR. DAVID KENNEDY CORPORATION, Rondout, N. Y., and a free trial bottle, together with a pamphlet of valuable medical advice, will be sent you by return and postpaid, providing you mention this paper when you write. The publishers of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this liberal offer.

HE HAD FOUND HER.

HOW MR. PRIMLEY KNEW MISS WILLOWBY WAS HIS IDEAL.

"Do you believe in territorial expansion, Miss Willowby?"

"Well, to tell the truth," the beautiful girl replied, "I haven't given enough study to that question to know anything about it."

Mr. Primley twisted his mustache for a moment and then asked:

"Are you in favor of an Anglo-Saxon alliance?"

"Oh, dear, I can't say. I haven't paid any attention to that subject. I confess that I am as ignorant as a child where public matters are concerned."

"Then you become interested in any of the reform movements?"

"No, I don't consider myself capable of taking up and discussing those things."

"Do you take much interest in science and are you in the habit of discussing the beauties of classical music, using technical terms, or are you an amateur literary critic, or do you ever talk to people about the great moral problems that are claiming the attention of so many of our learned women nowadays?"

"No, I'm ashamed to have to confess it, but I have found it impossible to get any of those things through my head sufficiently to dare to talk about them."

"You don't know anything about politics or socialism in its new sense, or the 'influence of the Compendium as Applied to the Comcomitants of Paleolithic Abnegation,' do you?"

"I—I am afraid I don't," she timidly replied.

"Say," he suddenly exclaimed, "will you be my wife?"—Chicago Record.

Hardware Dealer—"A door spring?"

Customer—"Yes; and one that won't require the strength of an elephant to open."

Dealer—"Hem!"

Customer—"And yet it must be strong enough to bring the door all way to and not leave it swinging a couple of inches."

Dealer—"I see."

Customer—"And when the door closes I don't want it to ram shut like a catapult with a jar that shakes the house from its foundations."

Dealer—"Yes, you want one that will bring the door all the way to and yet do it gently."

Customer—"That's the idea. But I don't want any complicated arrangement that requires a skilled mechanic to attend to it."

Dealer—"No, of course not. You want something simple, yet strong and effective."

Customer—"That's the talk; something that can be put on or taken off easily; something that will do its work quietly, yet thoroughly, and wont be eternally getting out of order."

Dealer—"I see; I know exactly what you want, sir, just exactly."

Customer—"Well, show me one."

Dealer—"We don't keep door springs."

Persons calling for the above should state that they were advertised.

GEO. F. YOUNG, Postmaster.

EDWARD EVERETT HALE says "one hundred days has put the world forward a hundred years."

THE Agricultural Department on Thursday issued a circular giving the substance of reports received by it up to June 10 on the condition of foreign crops. It says that a British commercial estimate tentatively puts the world's wheat crop of 1899 at 2,504,000,000 bushels, against 2,748,000,000 bushels in 1898, a reduction of 244,000,000 bushels, or nearly 8 9 per cent. Another estimate makes a reduction of 352,000,000 bushels.

ABOUT 20 per cent. of the value of all foods consumed by stock is regained in the manure. That is, if a farmer uses a dollar's worth of food and sell the produce therefrom for only one dollar he has 20 cents worth of manure, or more, left over. The manure heap is where the profits go, and this profit is again utilized for increasing the crops another year. No farmer can make a fair estimate of his receipts and expenses unless he attaches a value to his manure and gives it a place in his item of accounts. It represents capital ready for investment, and it gives better dividends than any thing else on the farm.

THE average number of bushels of corn per acre is 24. It requires as much labor and cost to grow the 24 bushels as it does to double the quantity; hence any expense for fertilizer is not only regained in the crop, but the cost of each bushel is proportionately reduced. The fodder is also a valuable portion of the crop, and there should be a gain in that direction also. No crop responds better to the application of fertilizer than corn, and it is one of the surest crops grown, all difficulties considered, and in comparison with other crops.

BARREN land may serve well for sheep, but to expect sheep to thrive on such locations is demanding too much. It is well enough to give up such land to sheep as they will gradually improve it, but the sheep should be given a little grain and hay in addition to that which they secure. Poor lands will improve when used for sheep, and more food will be secured each year therefrom, but the sheep must be assisted.

WHEN milk is not suitable for use on the table it is not suitable for the young calf. It may apparently be economical to use such milk for the calf, but the saving in milk will be balanced by loss in the calf, as it will suffer from scours or may not thrive.

AT this season of the year, when most of the produce of the farm is being made ready for market, the farmer should keep a sharp lookout for market reports of prices. The one who does so will know how to sell more intelligently and will have a great advantage over him who ships his produce to the commission merchant and then waits for the "returns" in order to learn prices.

ALL dairy farming is profitable compared with other specialties on the farm; yet dairying requires more work and care than the growing of crops. This demonstrates, however, that the most profitable methods demand labor, and that to attempt to save labor that is necessary is to incur a loss.

TOMATOES will be so easily affected with rot if the vines are fastened to uprights or stakes. An excellent mode is to utilize old barrels for the purpose by nailing one hoop to four staves. Sharpen the staves at the lower ends and drive in the ground. The hoops should be fastened to the staves with nails, and they will be found better than wire.

THE COOK LEFT.

MRS. NOOLIWEDDE HAD A HEART-BREAKING EXPERIENCE.

Like a Good Housewife, She Prepared Luncheon, but it Put a Bad Taste in George's Mouth---While He Was Gone to the Drug Store Old Friends Called.

She was in tears, and her dearest friend sought to comfort her.

"What is it?" she asked. "Has some-body given a reception and slighted you just when you have a new gown? Or have you the invitation and not the gown?"

"N-neither. Oh, it is something perfectly awful!"

"H'm! I suppose, then, your husband has been treating you badly. Well, as long as he has you might relieve your mind by telling me all about it."

"He hasn't either—I'd just like to see him try it! No, the—the c-cook is gone!"

"Pshaw! Is that all? Well, don't cry. I'll stay and help you. Let me see, I used to make a lovely omelet at school. It was cooked in a dustpan. Oh, do let us give a dinner party! Hasn't George some nice friends whom he might ask?"

"Ye-es, he—he has. I wish I had never seen any of them! I wish I had put off the wedding a year! I wish I had let George's old maid aunt come to live with us!"

The visitor looked alarmed. "You haven't any fever, have you, dear? And does your head feel quite right?"

"No, it doesn't. Get me another hand-handkerchief, and I'll tell you all about it. Just look at me, will you, and tell me what I look like."

"I'd rather not, dear. You might not like it. I—I suppose you have been trying to clean the soot out of the kitchen chimney, haven't you?"

"No, but I've been trying to cook luncheon. George said he didn't feel quite well after it was over, and he went over to the—the drug store to get something to take the taste out of his mouth I don't see why he need act that way when I had the loveliest roses on the table and other things too!"

"Well, don't be low spirited. We'll manage dinner, and there are lots of intelligence offices in town. We—can buy things ready cooked too."

"I—I don't care. I just don't care for anything. I can never hold up my head again as long as I live."

"You don't mean to say that George took too much of something to take the queer taste out of his mouth?"

"Of course I don't mean anything of the kind, and you are not a true friend or you'd never suggest such a thing. I cried a little after he went out, and I must have got some soot on my face and rubbed it in. Just then the doorbell rang, and, thinking the cook had perhaps relented and returned, I ran to answer it. It was not the cook, and, oh, Laura, who do you think it was?"

"I don't know. Your mother-in-law perhaps."

"I wish it had been my mother-in-law. She can cook. No; it was that horrid girl George used to be engaged to before he ever knew me. I never met her, but I recognized her from her photographs."

"If you never met her, how do you know she is horrid?"

"Humph! Any girl who could not get along with George must be horrid. Besides he has no taste at all—I can never see a trace of beauty in the woman he calls pretty."

"But tell me about opening the door."

"Oh, when I came face to face with her I thought I should die! Her husband was with her. Neither of them of course knew me, and"—

"I should think not, if you looked as you do now. How did you manage to tear your gown so?"

"Caught it on a nail. They both smiled when they saw me and ask if Mrs. Nooliwedde was at home. I saw they thought I was the maid, and, assuming a brogue—you know I was always good at amateur theatricals—I said: 'Faith, and that she is not. Who shall I say was afther askin for her?'"

"Oh, you clever girl! Why, I should never have thought of such a thing—not in a thousand years."

"Yes, wasn't it clever? But while she was taking out cards and expressing regrets I heard George come in the back way. In my agony lest he come out and betray me, I ran back to the dining room door, but before I could stop him he cried out, 'What is it, darling?'"

"You don't say so! Did they hear him, and what"—

"I caught a look of frozen horror on their faces as they turned and fled down the steps. Oh, I thought I should just die, and I—I wish I had."

"But perhaps, after all, they really thought you were the housemaid."

"George says he—he hopes not, for in that case what would they think of him for c-calling me 'darling?'"

And there was a sound of weeping in the room.—Elisa Armstrong in New York Journal.

A LITTLE girl sat gazing fixedly at the new bonnet of one of her mother's visitors, until the caller smilingly asked:

"Do you like it, my dear?"

The child innocently replied:

"Yes, I do. Mamma and Aunt Milly said it was a perfect fright, but it doesn't frighten me a bit."

A MEDDLESOME old woman was sneering at a young mother's awkwardness with her infant, and said: "I declare, a woman never ought to have a baby unless she knows how to hold it!" "Nor a tongue either," responded the young mother.

"I DON'T exactly love it," drawled Mark Twain, on being presented with his first born, "but"—edging away from the unconscious bundle of innocence whose advent had occasioned such a convulsion in his household—"but I respect it."

Boils and Pimples Give Warning.

AN UNFAILING SIGN THAT NATURE IS APPEALING FOR HELP.

When Nature is overtaxed, she has her own way of giving notice that assistance is needed. She does not ask for help until it is impossible to get along without it. Boils and pimples are an indication that the system is accumulating impurities which must be gotten rid of; they are an urgent appeal for assistance—a warning that can not safely be ignored.

To neglect to purify the blood at this time means more than the annoyance of painful boils and unsightly pimples. If these impurities are allowed to remain, the system succumbs to any ordinary illness, and is unable to withstand the many ailments which are so prevalent during spring and summer.

Mrs. L. Gentile, 2004 Second Avenue, Seattle, Wash., says: "I was afflicted for a long time with pimples, which were very annoying, as they disfigured my face fearfully. After using many other remedies in vain, S. S. S. promptly and thoroughly cleansed my blood, and now I rejoice in a good complexion, which I never had before."

Capt. W. H. Dunlap, of the A. G. S. R. R., Chattanooga, Tenn., writes: "Several boils and carbuncles broke out upon me, causing great pain and annoyance. My blood seemed to be in a riotous condition, and nothing I took seemed to do any good. Six bottles of S. S. S. cured me completely and my blood has been perfectly pure ever since."

S. S. S. FOR THE BLOOD

is the best blood remedy, because it is purely vegetable and is the only one that is absolutely free from potash and mercury. It promptly purifies the blood and thoroughly cleanses the system, builds up the general health and strength. It cures Scrofula, Eczema, Cancer, Rheumatism, Tetter, Boils, Sores, etc., by going direct to the cause of the trouble and forcing out all impure blood.
